Tourism & Hospitality School: Culinary Arts Course

The Palau Community College (PCC) Tourism & Hospitality Department began its two-week culinary arts class on August 19, 2013. In collaboration with the International Youth Ambassadors Interactive Program (IYAIP), the PCC Tourism & Hospitality Department hosted a course conducted by culinary arts students and a chef from Taiwan. Interested individuals signed up for the two-week culinary arts course. They included local chefs, cooks, and restaurateurs.

During the two-week culinary class, individuals who signed-up learned culinary techniques from the Taiwanese chef and students. This included proper dining etiquette, menu production, and the art of carving fruits & vegetables. The students and chef from Taiwan also had the opportunity to experience the culinary practices of Palau. They learned about creating dishes with local products such as taro, fish, and breadfruit. CULINARY, CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

PCC President Meets with Students

During the first two weeks of fall semester, Palau Community College (PCC) President Dr. Patrick U. Tellei met with different groups of students currently enrolled at the college. He met with the groups to impart advice about education and personal success.

President Tellei began by welcoming new and continuing students to a new school term. He recognized the number of challenges that build a college experience, and he emphasized the importance of responsibility alongside such experiences.

Ryukoku University Visits PCC

PCC students and the students from Ryukoku University.

On August 13, 2013 seven (7) students from Ryukoku University visited the campus of Palau Community College (PCC). The Ryukoku University is an institute of higher learning in Kyoto, Japan. It began as a Buddhist seminary basing its educational values on five pillars of Buddhism: equality, independence, self-reflection, gratitude, and peace. Ryukoku University is one of the oldest universities in Japan educating over 20,000 students. A prominent part of the school's education is exchange programs. RYUKOKU UNIVERSITY, CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

The school invites students from international universities to attend their school for a semester; they also provide an exchange program in which a group of its students travel to different places to experience other cultures.

The group of students from Ryukoku University visited Palau as part of their school's exchange program. They were accompanied by Dr. Yasukatsu Mastushima, a professor from the university who is acquainted with PCC Japanese Language Instructor Reiko Kawamura.

During their visit to PCC, they met with a group of students from the college to exchange ideas and cultural experiences. The students of Japan expressed their appreciation for Palau's beauty while the students from Palau shared their curiosities about Japan. In addition, the students also discussed different aspects of their cultures such as educational experiences, personal hobbies (e.g., playing video games or swimming), and traditions.

The group of Japanese students had also visited Guam on their way to Palau. Also included in their group were two professors from the University of Guam. Through such exchanges, the students attending PCC are exposed to the diversities of cultures and societies around the world.

He encouraged the students to consider their studies in a serious manner. The PCC Learning Resource Center was established as a place where students struggling with their studies may find assistance including tutorial services. These services are free-of-charge and are designed to support student learning. Thus, students should take advantage of the center especially if they cannot understand a particular subject.

Students, especially those who live off-campus, were asked to mingle and interact with students living on-campus. While it may be an easier college experience when living with family, students living in the dormitories are miles away from their home islands. Students were asked to extend a greeting hand to the new students, and to promote a diverse population at the school by participating in clubs or other school organizations.
